The weather in My Country

There are only two seasons in my country: The rainy season and the sunny season.

During the sunny season, the weather is almost tropical. The sun like a fiery ball hangs over the baking streets. The city is sweltering in the torrid air. The sultry winds blow into the stuffy cities from the Pacific Ocean, making the temperature change to a simmering suffocation.

But it's difficult to describe the weather in the rainy season. In the Northern region of the country, the drizzles keep falling down like snowflakes on barren lands. From time to time, some hail falls down like the bullets in the battle ground. In the Central region, it rains and rains for weeks or months. The peasants work tiredly in the dwarfed fields. In the southern region, it rains or shines. The downpour covers the city, the trees, and the people. On the street, the youths sit in a café, look at the rain, in the room is filled with cigarette smoke. They vaguely hear a familiar song. "Listen to the rhythm of a falling rain. The only girl I care for is far away..." It's raining.

The only good season we have is when it's not raining nor hot. The weather is controlled by God. If He wants rain, it rains. There's nothing we can do about it.

To the students of W-1

In the future, each time you open this book it will bring back memories, memories that will provide a laugh, a tear, a feeling of belonging to a special group at a special time. Perhaps you will also remember that the time at W-1 was well spent, well spent because of the lasting friendships developed and the many skills learned. This is what real education is about. However, in the final analysis, the best test of what you have learned will be the success that you attain when you use what you have been taught.

On the mornings of home football games, a loud racket rolls through the quiet byways of W-L. This sound is not an avalanche or an invading army, it is the W-L marching band charging through the halls. This organized mayhem gets people excited, stirs up spirit and makes the morning of a home game an event instead of just another school day. There is a lot that goes on behind the scenes to get the band ready for this yearly tradition. It is not as spontaneous as it may seem. Starting in the summer, this year a week before school, the band director and drum major had to teach all of the new members the fundamentals of marching. Every year, after the new members learn how to march, it seems as though half of the old members have to learn again also. This can be very frustrating. A second problem is getting people to learn the music. While the only music that the band plays in the halls are the three fairly simple school songs, the number of players who don't know them even by the time they are seniors is surprising. When you combine this with the fact that the sophomores have never played them at all, the sound produced by the band for a week or two can be pretty rancid. The biggest problem in playing in the halls is not the quality of the performance however, it is getting enough people to perform. Marching in the halls is a voluntary activity and many band members simply will not get up early enough to perform. Those who do play in the mornings invariably arrive later than they are asked to, thus delaying the start of the march for five to ten minutes. Despite all these problems and many, many others that I have not described here, marching in the halls is a very valuable and fun activity.
